Dear Students, dear Colleagues,

I would like to give you more details on the actions undertaken to start the teaching activities in distance learning mode.

The more than 120 professors, involved in the first phase of launching second semester’s lessons in distance learning mode, have been trained in the use of the tool that will support the delivery of the courses. A “virtual class” has been arranged for each course; students who have such course in the Study Plan can access these classes.

The teaching activities in distance learning mode will be provided with different tools and teaching methods: a tutorial will be shared in the upcoming weekend. We will also supply classrooms with the needed equipment and technical staff support for the professors requesting it.

We are working with the aim of activating from March 9th all the remaining courses, except for those involving the use of a laboratory, that will start later, also according to the competent authorities’ orders. In order to provide the necessary support for the delivery of teaching, we are verifying with professors any requirements in terms of technical equipment or logistical organization.

Lastly, I would add that this morning we decided to suspend:

- the on-line tests programmed until March 8th (which will be redefined);
- the Open Day scheduled in the Piacenza Campus.

Thank you for your attention
