Dear Students, Dear Colleagues,

tomorrow we will celebrate Easter. In general, this is the occasion to travel. Someone reaches their loved ones in other cities, others take the opportunity to take a trip. This year Easter is different than usual since we are asked not to move. To stay at home. We understand how important it is to respect the containment measures. In these days the signs of recovery give us hope, but we must hold on a little longer not to cancel the efforts made so far.

This year Easter is special, because it is an occasion of celebration and sacrifice at the same time. For the families who are lucky enough to be reunited and for those families who are distant or, even worse, have suffered losses of loved ones. But these are also the days in which to remind us, under a warm sun in a clear sky, that, after the dryness and the cold, comes a time when life will resume its course.

On behalf of the entire monitoring unit, we wish you and your families a Happy Easter. A moment that will become part of our lives and that I think no one will forget very easily.
